L. G. Dickerson

The remains of L. G. Dickerson were interred at McAuley graveyard, near Buena Vista, last Sunday. The deceased was a much beloved man by all who knew him. He left a wife, ten children, father and two sisters to mourn their loss. He was 56 years of age and had been a member of the Missionary Baptist church for 14 years. He will be greatly missed by his many friends. The bereaved have the sympathy of their friends and neighbors.

J. R. Rust Dead

J. Randolph Rust, a splendid citizen who resided a short distance out on route four from Huntingdon, died Wednesday morning at 4 o'clock, after an illness of about six weeks, but was confined to his bed for only ten days. The cause of his death was indigestion and enlargement of the liver, being practically unable to contain anything on his stomach. The deceased was 76 years old and had spent 73 of those years on the farm on which he resided when he died, with the exception of the time he was in the war, having served on the union side in the war between the states, and was a federal pensioner. He was a prosperous farmer, an excellent citizen, a good neighbor and friend, and stood high in the estimation of the people. He is survived by his widow, two sons, Homer and Elwood Rust and two daughters, Mrs. M. A. McCollum and Miss Jocie Rust. The burial occurred yesterday at Liberty A. H. He will be missed and his death is regretted.

Corn ain't worth a darn,
Trusts have got the nation,
Debts have got the farm,
Harding tells you nothing—
Wall Street is now king,
Money magnates now whistle,

Swift and Armour sing,
There's nothing in this story,
But as your homestead rocks,
Just whistle as you whistled,
When you sandbagged Jimmy Cox.
